LATVIAN PUBLISHING: A VERY BRIEF HISTORY

The 16th century saw the first developments in publishing in Latvia, but the industry was dominated by German publishers until the mid-19th century. The publishing of books in the Latvian language in Latvia became widespread only in the last decades of the 19th century, and many publishing houses were established in the beginning of the 20th century. A wide variety of books was published during the first period of Latvian independence, between the two world wars. The peak of Latvian publishing came in 1936, when 1,601 titles were published in four million copies (an average print run of 2,500 copies per title).

In 1940, just before the occupation of Latvia, there were nearly five hundred publishing houses in the country. During the years of Soviet occupation, publishing was controlled, financed, politically censored, and carefully planned by the Soviet government. The industry was concentrated in five state-run publishing houses, where everything had to be approved by a myriad of Soviet institutions.

In spite of this, publishing is considered the largest creative industry in Latvia based on turnover and number of employees. After Latvia regained independence in the early 1990s, the publishing sector was the first to be privatized. New publishing houses were founded, and the number of new titles is greater than it ever was during the first period of independence.

Regardless of the limited size of the market—with a national population of only 1.93 million—the standards of the publishing industry in Latvia are very high. Annual competitions for best fiction, poetry, books for children, and best book design displays a great variety and a high quality of artistic work, design, and creative thinking. Tradition and innovation go hand in hand: readers eagerly anticipate new books by well-established authors as well as literary debuts. Two well-established literary festivals add flair to the literary offerings: September's annual Poetry Days tradition dates back to 1960, while the Prose readings grew from a small literary event in mid-1990s to a full week of various activities and visiting foreign authors. The Children's Jury, a programme that promotes reading, and the Jānis Baltvilks' International Baltic Sea Literary Prize help boost interest among children and increase YA readership.

DISTRIBUTION

The distribution chain in Latvia has the following characteristics:

- No fixed prices.
- The recommended retail price is not set by the publishers, but calculated by mark-up on the publisher's price.
- Initial information on new titles is gathered and distributed by the weekly subscription-based publication Book News, published by the Latvian Booksellers Association.

Books can be ordered from the wholesalers Latvijas Grāmata and Jānis Roze or directly from the publishers. There are two big chains of brick-and-mortar bookstores (~35 bookshops each), several smaller chains and a few independent booksellers that sell books in Latvian. Approximately 15–20% of titles sold are foreign books imported from abroad—the European Union, the United States, Russia, etc. Online sales are provided by several bookshops and via the websites of some publishers. There are some platforms selling e-books in Latvian.

Latvians are used to buying books in bookstores, therefore the percentage of books sold through supermarkets, shopping malls, and other non-traditional outlets are smaller than in other countries.

LIBRARIES

Latvia has 1671 libraries in total:

800 public libraries

791 libraries of general and professional education

48 university libraries

31 specialized libraries

1 significant non-specialized library (the Academic Library of the University of Latvia)

42% of people in Latvia use library services

Latvian libraries employ 3854 people

On average, people visit the library 15 times a year.

Libraries spend 52.24 EUR per reader on average

Number of readers: 900,924

Fun fact! In 2014, a new library was opened, and it is now considered one of the most significant cultural buildings of 21st-century Latvia. The National Library of Latvia has made it into the BBC's list of ten of the most beautiful modern libraries in the world. Architect Gunārs Birkerts designed the building, deriving inspiration from one of the most prominent Latvian writers, Rainis, and his famous play Zelta zirgs (The Golden Horse). The play tells the story of the young peasant Antiņš, who climbs a mountain of blue glass and green ice, wakes a sleeping princess, and saves the kingdom. The building represents the Castle of Light—a symbol of the man's difficult yet brave and relentless struggle for knowledge and wisdom.

GRANT PROGRAMMES FOR TRANSLATORS AND PUBLISHERS

In 2016, with the support of the state grant program, 104,000 EUR was allocated to 36 foreign publishing projects. In 2017, the number of projects supported grew to 43, and a sum of 160,000 EUR in total was allocated to publishing Latvian literature abroad.

GRANTS FOR PUBLISHERS

The Latvian Writers Union administers two grant programs for foreign publishers. Two separate competitions are held each year: one for English and one for non-English publications. The competition has 3–4 rounds annually, where all applications are judged by a commission of five experts evaluating the professional experience and reputation of the applicants, as well as the works and its market potential. Publishers may apply for grants to cover all stages of publishing with regards to creating a book except for marketing activities and administrative costs. The highest estimated amount to be funded is 4,000 EUR for non-English publishing projects and 8,000 EUR for English ones.

SUPPORT FOR TRANSLATORS

The Latvian Writers Union offers financial support for translators who wish to translate Latvian literary works into any foreign language. In order to qualify for the opportunity to receive funding, the translator must submit a completed application form, a CV, a sample translation, and a letter of intent or an agreement signed by a publisher for publishing the particular work.

TURNOVER BASED ON PRODUCT CATEGORIES, 2017

Today, the largest export markets are Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Russia, Finland and Poland. The main print export products, such as books and magazines, go to Western Europe and Scandinavia, while labels and packaging tend to be for Eastern markets. Latvian printing and packaging companies are strong competitors in Russia, Ukraine and Belarus, due to their high-quality packaging and labels. Prestige and printed materials with added value include art books, illustrated magazines, guidebooks, and packaging for foods, perfumes and medicines. Latvia ranks second in Europe in the export share of books, with an export value of 80%.

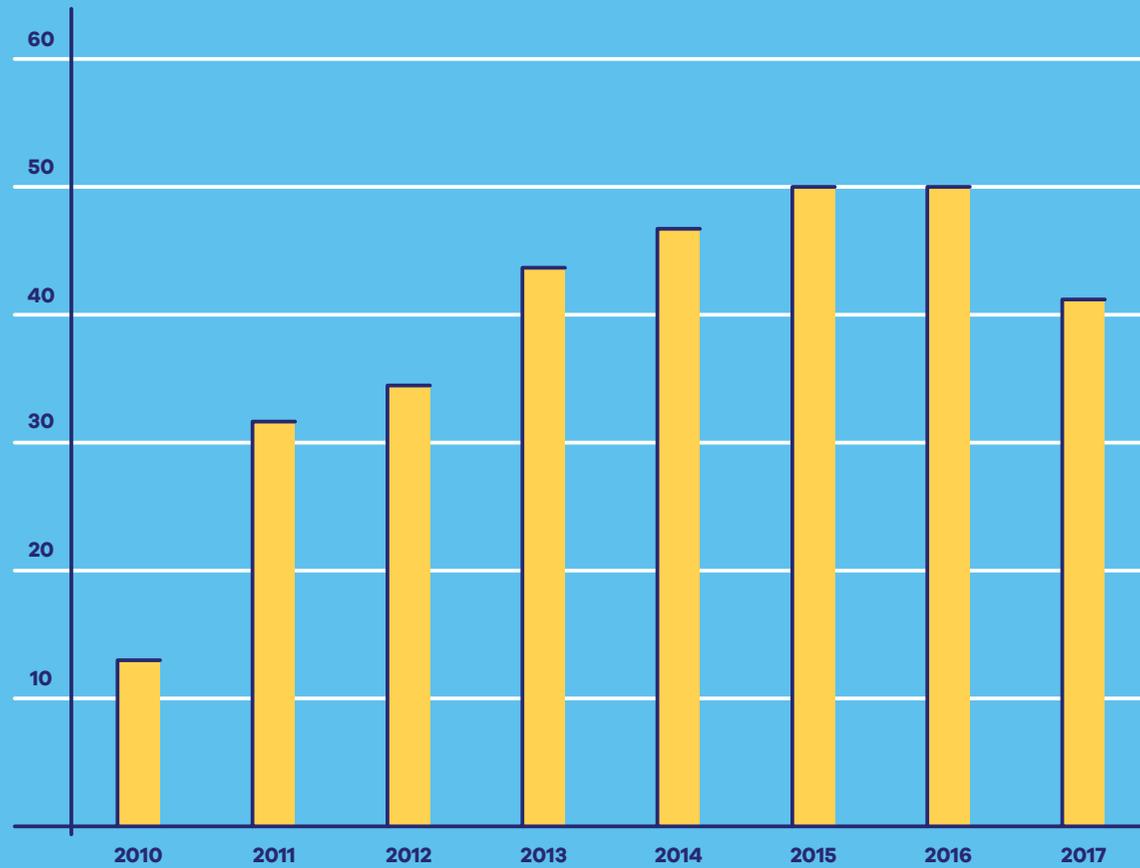

PRODUCT EXPORT BY COUNTRY, 2017

Latvian printing companies can boast considerable experience with export markets: efficient logistics management has been set up; data transfer and proofing are done electronically; and fully PDF-compatible workflow systems, ISO standards, and environmental certification have been put in place. Growing investments in the field, along with continuous technological development and modernization, has helped employees involved in the industry accumulate a great deal of knowledge and skills, which explains the high productivity rate per employee in this sector.

LITERARY FESTIVALS

INTERNATIONAL POETRY AND ARTS FESTIVAL POETRY DAYS

The international poetry and arts festival Poetry Days is one of the most important Latvian literature-related festivals and one of the most memorable phenomena of the Latvian cultural scene. This festival has been celebrating poetry ever since the centennial of Latvian poet Rainis in 1965. The aim of the festival was and still is to increase people's interest in literature—poetry in particular—and to introduce society to various forms, current trends and new iterations of poetry. Poetry Days take place in September, when poets and poetry are celebrated all across Latvia at various events. The core of the festival, however, is a 10-day series of more than 30 events reflecting current trends in Latvian poetry. All of the events in the 10-day span take place in various parts of Riga. Every year, Poetry Days welcomes more than 10 international guests, who perform in cooperation with local artists.

Festival dates 2018: 6–16 of September

The event was begun as a literary evening dedicated to writer Andrejs Upītis' birthday, and from its modest beginnings it has grown into a multi-day annual festival with many generations of Latvian writers and guests from other European countries performing their latest works. Prose Readings has become an inspiring meeting place for authors and their readers. It is an important literary landmark that shows the continuous growth and latest developments in Latvian culture.

POETRY WITHOUT BORDERS FESTIVAL

On 2–4 June, 2017, the trilingual festival Poetry Without Borders was held for the first time. The festival features poets writing in Latvian, Russian, and in a guest language—for the first season, Swedish was selected as the third language. Every language is represented by four authors; all the poems are recited in three languages to enable real-time dialogue between the poets and their texts. The festival is organized by the Literature Without Borders project, a non-profit organization publishing poetry in Russian, Latvian and English, as well as providing a residency program for poets and translators of poetry. The project focuses on furthering literary processes in Latvia, promoting Latvian literature abroad, fostering accessibility of culture and literature for wider audiences, and informing Latvian readers on the latest innovations in contemporary poetry.
